“ Charles Henry was certainly one of a kind. Not many men would take in another man's children and treat them as his own. And then to treat the grands and great grands the same way. He always provided a pig for all the youngens to raise and taught them how to show them and care for them. Many went on to become Grand Champions and Champions. He also did this for many young 4-H children in this county and others. He raised quality animals. His smile and easy manner will certainly be missed by the family and all his many friends. Our deepest sympathy goes out to Sara and the rest of the family. Rest in Peace, Charles Henry.
Sincerely, Larry and Candy Reneau

“ Well, I laughingly referred to Charles Henry as an old curmudgeon when speaking to Don, his brother--it's been a while ago. Charles never had a problem letting you know what he did NOT like, by the same token, he never had a problem showing my husband and me that he LOVED us! We'd look all over East Texas to find the right kind of catfish--he could tell by tasting it if it was the real CATFISH, not Vietnamese Basa. And he would spare no expense when he wanted to celebrate! The most memorable time I had with him, Sara & Chris, was when he wanted to go to Johnny Cace's in Longview. Nothing would do but HE buy the meal. Other times, the guys would bicker (just a little) over who was to pay. Sara and I just went along and enjoyed our husbands laughing and joking with one another. Many times, on our Sunday evening trike rides, we'd stop by Charles and Sara's just to say hi. But if Charles had some souse in the fridge, invariably Jan would pull out a chair, grab a handful of saltines and make himself at home. When Rusk Chamber of Commerce had a Mexican Fiesta for the annual banquet, Jan and I wanted to dress up, Jan being a mariachi, I being a senora. Jan asked Charles, "Charles Henry, do you have a pair of RED boots I could borrow tonight?" Sure enough, he stepped back to his closet and brought out a box of the most beautiful, flawless red cowboy boots and told Jan, "they don't have a mark on them, and keep them in the box when you're not wearing them". Jan looked wonderful in his costume. And the best part was Charles' size 12 red cowboy boots! By the way Jan wears a size 8. Just a few months ago, Charles called Jan out to their house and gave him the red cowboy boots. It was sad but sweet, because I knew if he was giving them away, he didn't think he'd have an occasion to wear them. Always looking fine and smelling like a million bucks, I'd get my hug and hop in the back seat with Sara on one of our many ventures. I'll miss you Charles. There was only ONE of you. God was so proud of how He created you, He just knew you were His BEST, so there was no need to try to improve upon you! Susan Pate

I used to hunt with Charles, Don and his father Frank. Had some great times and always looked forward to our excursions. I had an old Savage rifle that Charles took a liking to and wanted from the first time he saw it. I do not care where I was, if he saw me, he would ask me if I was ready to sell. That went on for years. I took it out today and remembered many good times. To you Charles, "Sadler" I will always be. Love and prayers for you and the family.
