“ I remember when I was a little girl, Mom would take me with her to Aunt Maureen's house to visit. She knew my aunt was lonely, so we would go check on her. I later found out there were several "elderly" ladies she visited through the years and made a special effort to let each one know she was there if they needed anything. She taught me to be empathetic. We never really know what someone deals with until you sit and listen to their journey in life without judgment and condemnation.
