

Frankie Stevenson

January 22, 1985 - February 22, 2026

Frankie left this world far too soon, but in the time he had, he lived life in a way that was unmistakably his own. He had a sharp wit, a dark sense of humor, and a way of seeing the world that could make people laugh when they least expected it. He wasn't the type to surround himself with a crowd—he kept his circle small—but if you were in that circle, you knew you mattered.

He didn't waste time pretending to be someone he wasn't. He spoke his mind, stood his ground, and lived life on his own terms. His humor could catch you off guard, but it was part of what made him unforgettable. The people who knew him best understood that behind that humor was someone who cared deeply in his own quiet way.

Karaoke nights were one of the places where his personality really showed. He sang with confidence, heart, and just enough humor to make the moment memorable. It didn't matter if he hit every note perfectly—what mattered was that he showed up, enjoyed the moment, and gave everyone a reason to smile & the ladies loved him.

He leaves behind family who loved him, friends who understood him, and memories that will continue to bring laughter long after today. His absence leaves a space that cannot be replaced, but the stories, the jokes, and the moments shared with him will live on with those who knew him best.

We will remember him the way he lived—authentic, bold, and never afraid to be exactly who he was.
