“ I remember riding on the back of his super Glide Harley-Davidson taking corners overspeeds past 100 mpg with his long hair beating me in the face at speeds so fast that my eyes could not resist watering, he was a harsh man, with a hardened heart, but deep down in that heart, there was is a small spot for me so I took it and kept it, and it is mine today and forever an always and I keep it close to my hardened heart to remind me just the smallest spot for softness can create a portal open for the kindness, most loving, people to fill! Which implies what made me the man I am today in the man I am but yet to become...
